

Books that Speak to You

Books speak to us in many ways, sometimes quite literally. We love audiobooks, because they let us enjoy stories while commuting, doing chores, or just when we don't feel like holding up a 700 page tome. VBDL has audiobooks available in several formats, so you can keep up with your reading in whatever way suits you. You can use the Libby and Hoopla apps on your phone, tablet, or computer, so you can take your books almost anywhere you go! If you love the experience of holding a book, but want to let it serenade you with its stories, might we suggest our audiobooks on CD. Ooo, listen to the sweet crunch of opening an audiobook case!

Do you have a young reader who needs a little nudge in becoming a strong reader? Take a look at the new VOX books available at VBDL! Scan the shelves in the children's areas and see if you can find the books that read aloud as the reader follows along with the text. VBDL has picture books, early readers, fiction, non-fiction, and books in English and Spanish. Next time you stop by, see what titles we have available and listen to a great book!

Did you also know about the Braille and Talking Book Library? It is a service provided by the Library of Michigan, which lends audio and braille books to Michigan residents unable to use standard print materials due to a visual, physical, or reading disability. If you or someone you know is interested and eligible for this service, be sure to check out their website here!

What's Cookin' at the library?

It's November, which we don't know about you, but it makes us librarians feel like cooking and getting ready for friends and family. Or just enjoying good food for the sake of good food. During November, we will be highlighting cookbooks on all of the Van Buren District Library Facebook pages, with staff favorites, themed days, and some fun. Be sure to follow us on Facebook to see all of the scrumptious books we have found as well as tell us your favorite cookbooks or recipes!
